

March 18, 2014
Tuesday 5.00 pm

Hilary A. Lewis

Author, Lecturer, Senior Editor Tropic Magazine
Princeton/MIT /Ph.D. (ABD), Harvard University

Philip Johnson: You Cannot Not Know History

(c) Greg Gorman Photography

Philip Johnson (July 8, 1906 – January 25, 2005) was an influential American architect. In 1930, he founded the Department of Architecture and Design at the Museum of Modern Art in New York City. In 1978 he was awarded an American Institute of Architects Gold Medal and in 1979 the first Pritzker Architecture Prize. His impact on American architecture cannot be ignored nor understated.

Hilary Lewis is an expert on architecture, urban planning and real estate development who has produced books, articles, magazines, websites and film. Trained in public policy, urban planning and history of architecture, she examines and comments on the challenges confronting the 21st-century city.

Lewis has collaborated with leading figures of the building industry. With eminent architect Philip Johnson, she wrote two books, multiple articles and produced a short film during twelve years of ongoing work. Lewis recorded extensively Johnson's memoirs and ideas on architecture, making her today the premier source for information on the late architect.

Johnson and Lewis co-authored pieces for magazines and exhibitions, including work for The New York Times Magazine, Details and the Venice Biennale.

Lectures 2014

FAU School of Architecture

MetroLAB Askew Tower
220 SE 2nd Avenue /Las Olas Blvd
Fort Lauderdale 33301
contact mdevine@fau.edu
001 954 762 5654

FAU
METROLAB